

7th 4 Dec 1908 Oroua.

Ureteric Calculi

Ureteric calculi are a common cause of renal colic and haematuria. They are usually composed of calcium oxalate or calcium phosphate. The symptoms are severe pain in the loin, radiating to the groin, and blood in the urine. The diagnosis is confirmed by the passage of a stone or by the detection of calcium in the urine. Treatment consists of drinking plenty of water and the use of analgesics. In some cases, surgical removal is necessary.