

Handwritten scribbles at the top of the page, possibly including the number '222'.

In aⁿ Subscription 1909 American

Epistle to the Hebrews
The writer of the epistle to the Hebrews is not known, but it is generally believed to have been written by one of the apostles or by a close associate of one of them. The epistle is addressed to Hebrew Christians who were tempted to return to Judaism. The writer exhorts them to persevere in their faith and to look to Jesus as the author of their salvation. The epistle is one of the most profound and mystical of the New Testament writings. It is written in a highly poetic and figurative style, and it contains many references to the Old Testament. The epistle is divided into 13 chapters, and it is one of the longest of the epistles. It is a masterpiece of Christian literature, and it has inspired many generations of Christians. The epistle is a beautiful and powerful expression of the Christian faith, and it is a treasure that should be read and studied by all who love the Lord.

le ouïe ou si Apomaxetis bon, par de lo octaf re à son se pul lo d'ou appé aint pul ou'rotelas, riper de i'p'de en S ad i'p'de riper riper de de l'ou de d'ou i'p'de et riper de l'ou d'ou riper, riper.

Est h'ou le pul riper de de d'ou pul riper de de d'ou riper de de d'ou

[Faint, illegible handwriting]